

The aims of UKPIPS are:

- to provide information and mutual support for patients (and their carers, partners and family) with Primary Antibody Deficiency and other Primary Immune Deficiencies, residing permanently or temporarily in the UK
- to establish a volunteer medical panel comprising appropriate experts.
- to advance the education of the general public and the medical community in all areas relating to Primary Antibody Deficiency and other Primary Immune Deficiencies
- to promote the social and medical welfare of people with Primary Antibody Deficiency and other Primary Immune Deficiencies
- to encourage research into Primary Antibody Deficiency and other Primary Immune Deficiencies
- to champion recognition and representation
- to expand activities from time to time in any way that may be broadly consistent with the foregoing in order to bring benefit to the community of people in the UK with Primary Antibody Deficiency and other Primary Immune Deficiencies.
